Super Third Summer Play Program Is Slated To Get Going on Monday, June 26

—LINOLEUM BLOCK BY JOHN TODD.

Cheer up, youngster, you'll be off the curb and onto the play field on June 26 for that's when Carmel's Super Recreation Program gets under way.

Carmel's Third Summer Recreation Program opens on June 26 with the promise of topping its predecessors both in the play and in the constructive activities it offers the town's young people.

According to plans announced by Mrs. Ann B. Uzzell, co-ordinator, though there is to be a generous number of hours devoted to play, there will be an increased opportunity this year for worthwhile study and training in handicraft, so that at the end of the summer the children will have something to show for their vacation time. What's more, they will have facilities for showing their accomplishments to the town at a Field Day to be held toward the end of the program when exhibits from the pottery group, marine biology study section, plane modeling club, articles made in the Red Cross sewing room, USO scrapbooks, and badges and prizes won by the generals and admirals in the Children's Summer Reading Army will be on display. And the folk dancing classes will make no small contribution to Field Day entertainment.

In the realm of pure fun, the recreation program includes bicycle picnics, a regular Friday beach day with supervised play and picnic lunch, tennis under an expert instructor, Miss Carol Tindel, and the usual supervised games on the school playfields.

In the evening The Club will be available to the high school age group Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday from one o'clock in the afternoon until ten at night, on two nights until twelve. On the evenings when The Club is closed, the high school gym will be open for supervised games.

So much is already arranged for. There are other plans in the making which cannot be announ-

How Many Others Are Counting Ten?

We have counted ten. We have inhaled deeply and repeated to ourselves various Christian maxims, among them, "Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself," but it doesn't work. We can't love the Monterey Ice Delivery Company. Not while they have three good quarters—seventy-five cents—of our money in their little metal box on their ice dispensing machine that didn't dispense.

On three occasions, over a period of two weeks, once on a warm Sunday morning, once late on Thursday night and once in the middle of the afternoon on a week day, we have visited the ice machine, made our contribution and gone away without ice. On each occasion we have wondered how long the machine was empty before we arrived and how many Carmel quarters had rattled futilely into the little box before ours joined them, and how many Carmel quarters would be tossed into the kitty after ours before the Ice Company should get around to loading up the machine again. It makes an interesting subject for speculation.

How long this has been going on we do not know because all during the winter months we did not have to visit the ice machine. The driver called at our home regularily, and we liked that arrangement very well because never did he take our money or ice tickets off the top of our ice box without leaving us a chunk of ice, and this coincided with our preconceived ideas about business transactions. But when a spell of hot weather came and we really needed ice, there must have been a good many others who also needed ice so that the driver didn't get around to our place. We didn't mutter too much about it. We know all about wartime labor shortages. So we went to the ice machine to serve ourselves.

Sometimes when we put our coin in the slot, down came a piece of ice with a rush and a thump. It was even tied up with a hairy rope handy for hauling. And that was just fine. The fun of having our ice presented to us in this noisy and dramatic manner made up for the nuisance of having to call for it. Sometimes we didn't put our coin in at all because there was a twine tied across the machine which said as plainly as print, "Out of Order," or "Empty." And though disappointing, it was fair enough. But on the occasions when there was no twine and we put our money in the machine which says "24 hour ice service. Deposit one quarter," and got nothing, we were upset. We are conventional, we don't like change. All our life we have clung to the belief that when one pays for a piece of merchan-

Horne-Jelich Row Again In Court Tuesday

The Jelich - Horne fracas will come up again for airing in court when the trial of civil suits brought by Mrs. Eleanor Horne, Monterey, against Carmel's Chief of Police, Roy Fraties, and Police Officer Edward Jelich opens before Judge H. G. Jorgensen in Salinas Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Horne's complaint against the chief of police charges that on March 8, 1944 he "violated her personal liberty, forcibly confining her against her will in police headquarters in Carmel for the period of an hour to her damage at the amount of $1500."

Against Jelich she charges "unlawful use upon her person of force and violence to her damage in the amount of $2,000."

This case is the culmination of a series of skirmishes between Mrs. Horne and the Carmel police, which began with her arrest on March 8 for a minor traffic violation. She resisted arrest and there was a scuffle between her and Jelich when he took her into custody.

Her first protest appeared in the form of a letter to the City Council. While the council was making an investigation, District Attorney Anthony Brazil filed a criminal complaint against Jelich and he was brought to trial in Judge Ray Baugh's court in Monterey. The jury brought in a not guilty verdict. The city council vindicated Jelich and Fraties. Mrs. Horne, pleading not guilty to the traffic violation, was found guilty by City Judge George P. Ross and assessed a minor fine.

Her attorneys, Eben Whittlesey, Carmel, and John Milton Thompson, Monterey, then brought civil action for her against Jelich and the Chief of Police which is to

$149,486 Raised In First Week Of V War Loan Drive

Carmel's 5th War Loan drive got under way this week. Ken Carleton's precedent breaking "bond-fights" were the starter. Then Harrison Godwin named his committee, and immediately called a meeting for 5 p. m. today (Friday). Plans for pushing the sale of bonds will be laid at this session, and from then on things may be expected to start with a hum and quickly rise to a roar of activity.

Carmel's committee is composed of a group of doers and action will be the watchword. The personnel follows: Chairman Harrison Godwin, Mayor P. A. McCreery, Tom Bunn, Frank Hefling, Ken Carleton, Paul Mercurio, Frank Shea, Stuart Haldorn, A. C. LaFrenz, R. D. Hebb, Miss Kathleen Prewett, Mrs. Joseph W. Stilwell, Mrs. Helen Cranston, Mrs. Robert Stanton, and Mrs. Alton Walker.

In addition to the $75,000 raised by Ken Carleton's activities, sales up to Thursday were $74,486 bringing the total to $149,486.

We Can't Beat The Old Timers, Do What We Will--We Can't Even Tie'em

As Monday night's V Bond Bouts were the first ever to be held in the Forest Theatre, a good many of Carmel's newer citizens were under the impression that they were the first ever to be staged in Carmel. This is not the case. Old timers last week were recalling with relish, "A four round prize fight of professional pugilists," to quote the Pine Cone of August 1, 1925, held in Devendorf Plaza as one of the attractions of the Arts and Crafts Annual Circus, Mrs. Phil K. Gordon and Perry Newberry in charge.

"Bobby Norton is to defend the boxing championship of Carmel," said the Pine Cone Editor of that period, the late William Overstreet, "Dear me! Such a nice boy and so peaceable looking."

Whom Bobby Norton met on that occasion, even Bobby Norton could not recall when the Pine Cone got in touch with him last week. "Some kid from out of town," he said. But he did recall the other names on the card: Louis Striker, Johnny Welner and "a boy named Marques."

Norton, a remarkably modest champion, was not prepared to make any statement about the outcome of his engagement with the "boy from out of town," but we have the word of an old timer who has a long memory, "Bobby Norton hit him so hard he was three days coming to."

To us and our contemporaries, a fight in Carmel is a seven day's wonder, but to our sophisticated predecessors who were the vitalizing spirit of Carmel in 1925, the "four round prize fight of professional pugilists" was just another event of the Arts and Crafts circus that offered such competing attractions as "Little Egypt" and "Austin James' exhibition of living statuary."

According to advance notice in the Pine Cone:

"Our best Hoochie-cootchie dancer was formerly known as Carmel's Little Egypt. During the recent Santa Barbara disturbance she made a trip down there, parked her car and watched State Street give a sinuous wiggle up and down its back bone, then tie itself into a double bow-knot, and Little Egypt turned round and came right home again. Now they call her Little Earthquake. She

THE RAIN THIS WEEK

An unusually late rain this week registered .051 of an inch in Professor Francis E. Lloyd's rain gauge bringing the total to date, 20.31 inches. Last year to date's record was 17.35.

Children's Reading Army Organized At Harrison Library

Backing her belief that reading is the truest recreation for all ages, Miss Niles, librarian of the Harrison Memorial Library, is organizing an army of readers for the Carmel Summer Recreation Program. Children in Fourth to Seventh grades may volunteer at the Library for service with Mrs. Pauline Heisinger, the junior librarian. After reporting on six books, not read previously, they will be inducted into the army readers as privates. Tests on each succeeding six books will advance the book-armed soldiers along the regulation army grades from private to general.

By the end of summer, Miss Niles hopes to have an organization strong enough to hold the line all through the school year.

Carmel Reverts To The Elemental, Pine Needles Drift Down to Resin Covered Canvas In Forest Theatre

Carmel had a very good time at the V Bouts in the Forest Theatre Monday night. For those who weren't enthusiastic fightfans there was the 38 piece band from Fort Ord which was loud and good with three tubas. The soloists were so adept that everyone was pleased when one of them won the drawing for a case of Bourbon whiskey which we understand is scarce now on account of the war because they are using the corks to bottle up the Japs—so said the man sitting next to us when Louis Turango drew the ticket for the winner.

Packages of wines, whiskey and liquors were auctioned off to bond buyers by Judge Ray Baugh of Monterey who proved an excellent auctioneer, refusing to consider a starting bid under a $1000 bond and, as a general thing, not allowing anything to go for less than $2500 worth of bonds.

S/Sgt. Royden Martin took a bow and made a brief speech when one of his desert watercolors was knocked down for $2300 in bonds. Don Blanding read a poem from his Pilot Bails Out and contributed six autographed books to the auction.

Mayor P. A. McCreery, in his speech opening the drive, made it clear that it was only because of the great need for selling bonds that the city had allowed the Forest Theatre to be used for a boxing match and that the occasion is to be unique in the annals of the town. He introduced "Carmel's one and only" Ken Carleton as the impresario who had put on the show.

Sgt. Gordon Ayers had his moment before the microphone telling jokes in his inimitable and embarrassing manner.

Rachel Morton led the mass singing of the National Anthem.

As for the fights, in most cases they were good-natured exhibitions with nobody getting hurt, which was as it should be since the men were contributing their services to the cause, no purse was involved, and there was no good reason for anyone to knock anyone's head off. There were several exceptions in the case of boys who went in slugging to collect bets their friends in camp had placed on them. On the whole, the light weights put on the best show for the spectators since it is possible for them to give a fair boxing exhibition without doing too much damage. Especially interesting to watch was the work of Jimmy Alexander, Golden Gloves and AAU Champion, 1944, who on the aggressive had a distinctive style and on the defensive was able to ooze out of trouble with the celerity and ease of a Carmel Bay seal.

It was a pleasure to see so fine a speciman of humanity in action as Rusty Payne, light heavyweight champion of the Pacific Coast. He was occupied during the four two minute rounds in holding up Al Laboa of San Jose. In the second round he landed some short body jabs but they were in the in-fighting and were more punishing than showy.

As in everything else, Carmel lent its distinctive touch to the bouts. Pine needles, drifting down from the historic Forest Theatre trees, lay on the resin-covered canvas, offering a hazard to the footwork of the fighters; and "Doc" Don Staniford and Tal Josselyn, who with John Blewett served as judges, were definitely individualistic in some of the decisions they handed down.

From the point of view of the United States Treasury Department, the V Bouts were a success, as the event is credited with selling $75,000 in bonds, a tenth of Carmel's quota. They also scored high as entertainment, providing a gladsome and noisy good time for Carmel which is none the worse for having been jogged out of its aesthetic quiet on this one occasion.

Drawing For Fight Tickets Main Event At Barn Door Show

By WAC Sgt. Elizabeth Germain, U. S. Army Air Forces

The horse-headed heifer at the USO Barn Door Canteen looked down on a well rounded series of vaudeville revivals Saturday night.

The openers were Sammy and Mary Munoz who gave a youthful version of the Spanish dance with unconscious rhythmic charm. Next in line came 18 year-old Bob Crowther, the youngest fire eater in America. A stellar performer from south of the border, and Fort Ord, followed the magic man. Jose Manero has had many larger and more illustrious audiences, but none more appreciative than that at the Barn Door Canteen Saturday night which thrilled to three interpretations of the dance from his native Mexico.

Gordon Ayers dramatized the ups and downs of travel today. Maria Sanchez gave three Castillian dances and Bob Hendricks filled the following few minutes with song.

After the program a drawing was held to determine which service men should receive eleven tickets to the boxing bouts donated by the Lions Club, Dr. J. B. McCarthy and another donor.

Col. Davidson

Word was received here this week of the death on May 20, in Dallas, Texas, of Col. Wilson T. Davidson, U. S. Army, retired.

Colonel Davidson made his home in Carmel for many years and between 1935 and 1938 was engaged in the practice of medicine, maintaining an office on Dolores st. He was born at Washington-on-the-Brazos, Texas, and graduated from the Belton high school and the University of Texas. As a surgeon in the U. S. Army Medical Corps, Col. Davidson was stationed for a time preceding the Spanish-American War at the Presidio of Monterey. Following his service in that war, he was assigned to a post in the Philippines for a number of years and gained much experience among the Moros on Mindanao. During World War I he saw active duty in Italy.

At the time of the San Francisco earthquake and fire, Col. Davidson was placed in charge of public health conditions, and following his retirement from the Army, he held the post of director of public health in Dallas, Texas. His autobiography, record of a long and colorful life, is now in the hands of his publishers and will shortly be off the press, under the title, Pills, Pains and People, the Memoirs of an Army Doctor.

Service Wives Committee Heads In Business Meet

Service Wives' Center committee heads and desk personnel held a business session Monday afternoon at the Pine Inn at which time reports were given of the various activities. Mrs. A. V. Arnold, chairman of the executive committee presented a plan for the permanent organization of the Service Wives' Center, outlining the purposes, naming the standing committeees and stating procedure for electing chairmen. Mrs. George McK. Williamson, director of the Center, presided at the business meeting which followed.

Mrs. L. L. Kotzebue, treasurer of the Center, gave the financial report. The proceeds from the Fashion Show exceeded expectations and several gifts have been received. There are no dues within the organization and support in this manner is most welcome.

Mrs. Franklin P. C. Miller has recently taken over the roster which now includes about 800 names. She explained the procedure in filling out and filing the cards for the desk workers.

Mrs. R. C. Weller, president of the Army and Navy Officers' Wives' social club, announced that the USO has been secured as a regular meeting place for the group. A dessert bridge will be held each Thursday at 1 o'clock, and those who do not play cards may sew during the afternoon. Reservations should be made with Mrs. Weller.

Mrs. Owen R. Meredith, wife of Colonel Meredith, commanding officer at the Presidio of Monterey, outlined the set-up and functions of the Personal Affairs Division, of the Army. Mrs. William H. Bartlett explained the bulletin board and Mrs. Francis H. Falkner reported on temporary housing. Mrs. Gerald E. Galloway will take over this department for the next few weeks.

Mrs. C. E. Dunn was introduced as the new secretary of the Center, as were additional desk personnel including: Mrs. George V. Keyser, Mrs. John McRae Taylor, Mrs. William A. Storts, Mrs. D. T. Patenaude, Mrs. E. T. Ashworth, Mrs. C. R. Gainor, Mrs. A. H. Conners and Mrs. Norman H. Weggland.

Mrs. Joseph W. Stilwell is chairman of the advisory board which is to include representation from the Army and Navy, the Army Daughters, the wife of the commanding officer or executive of Fort Ord, and of the Presidio of Monterey, IIIrd Army Corps, a permanent resident of Carmel, retired Army or Navy, the AWVS and the Red Cross. Mrs. Stilwell, Mrs. C. E. Brigham and Mrs. John Millikin, wife of General Millikin, commanding officer of Third Army Corps, were present at Monday's meeting.

A report on the first two months' activities of the Center compiled by Mrs. Fred L. Eldridge, was read, and special notice was given the large number of service families who have obtained women and high school girls to take care of their children, through the organization.

Announcement was made of the Alison Stilwell lecture to be given on Sunday, July 2, at Sunset Auditorium, which is sponsored by the Fort Ord chapter of Army Daughters. Tickets are on sale at the Service Wives' Center in the Pine Inn.

Back the Attack! BUY MORE THAN BEFORE

Carmel has had a 73.9% increase handed to it in the sale of bonds for the 5th War Loan Drive. We thought we had a big quota on the 4th War Loan, but being Carmel, we went over the top, and led the United States in quotas exceeded. All of us are particularly proud of that.

Now we have a bigger job and all of us will have to buckle down and get busy, to see that we not only reach, but that we surpass our goal.

The slogan "Back the Attack, Buy More than Before," is a good one. If we just stop to think that now that the new front is well established on French soil, that our sons and our daughters may be there, or on one of the many other fronts in this global war we will dig, and dig deeply, so that there may be no dearth of fighting materials for them.

We now are at the crisis of the war in Europe. The war in the Pacific is reaching new heights. Every man, woman and child in Carmel, I know, has someone, somewhere, who needs the backing of War Bonds. If we care for the life of that someone, then we, of necessity, will have to range ourselves alongside him, in spirit, and send this message, "We are backing you with everything we have. We are fighting by your side."

Buy bonds and then more bonds, is my message to each one of you in Carmel.

P. A. McCreery, Mayor

Councilman Bernard Rowntree is ill in a San Francisco hospital but his thoughts are still on Carmel affairs as this letter received Thursday morning clearly indicates:

Dear Editor:

From time to time, statements appear about the Red Cross Ambulance. It might be a good idea, for the records, to state the facts.

When the fire house was being designed and built, I had something to do with the plans (He was fire commissioner at the time—ed.) and I was criticised by some for providing four stalls when there were only three pieces of fire equipment. My reply was that someday we might have more and might have a paid chief who could keep his "buggy" there.

It would be easy to find out how long or short a time elapsed after the fire house was completed until the fourth stall was occupied.

At that time Birney Adams was outstanding in his work of fire prevention, salvage and first aid. The salvage truck was being used for carrying injured and sick persons and Birney started putting the heat on me to get something better than the salvage truck for first aid work.

The late C. W. Lee was remarkably successful collecting money for worthwhile civic projects and he had made the statement to me that he could raise any reasonable amount of money for any worthy cause in a very short time.

I remember the day I buttonholed him in front of the Pine Cone office; reminded him of his statement, and dared him to get an ambulance for Carmel.

He went and did it.

No one had any thought of garaging the ambulance in the fire house but the objections to a service station garage that would be locked at night were very apparent.

I do not recall whose idea it was to use the empty stall in the fire house but it was done.

Everyone does or should know the splendid work being performed by the Red Cross Ambulance and the volunteer first aid firemen who respond to the calls of those in trouble. Due credit cannot be given to every man who has or who is helping, as I do not know who all of them were and are. Fred Mylar, who we all know is an example illustrative of the splendid, unselfish work these men have done and are doing. There should be an honor roll of them.

—Bernard Rowntree.

We are grateful Bernard Rowntree started the activities that resulted in the purchase of the Red Cross Ambulance and glad it was available to make his trip to the hospital a bit more endurable. W.C.

Anne Nash's New Murder Mystery Now On Stands

Death by Design, a second Crime Club murder mystery by Carmel's well-loved Anne Nash, burst upon the bookstands during the past week, the sinister spider-web replete with spinning insect and dangling victim which garnishes its jacket giving a fair promise of the chills that lurk within its pages.

Here the reader finds again as narrator the plump and witty Dodo, her red-haired partner in the village flowershop, the temperamental Nell, Pat Merrick their faithful man-of-all-work and the altogether charming private investigator, Mark Tudor, with his all-seeing dog, Svea, who made their enlivening debut in Anne Nash's earlier whodunit, Said With Flowers.

The scene is again that locale of sand dunes, pine trees and creepy fog which is easily recognizable behind its disguising name of Pinecrest. Indeed, one of the many excellent features of this well-written book is the way in which its author makes the sensory impressions of her setting do double duty as background and accessories to crime.

The story of intrigue and sudden death involving all three of the Tragic Trasks, Mary, Stephen and David, moves with rapid pace and mounting suspense from the moment Rita, David's glamour-girl wife, steps into the flowershop, on Page 1, accompanied by that philandering bon-vivant, Sheldon Burke. By the time Stephen Trask is discovered, bloody knife in hand, standing over the body of Author Nash's first victim, on Page 39, the reader is entitled to cherish the foulest suspicions of no less than five people, chuck-full of motives and opportunities. What whodunit fan could ask for more!

The various characters who in turn rush, move gracefully, and slink furtively through this well-potted story (which, pardon me, I do not mean to tell) are all three-dimensional, exceedingly interesting individuals, thanks to the author's gift of characterization. Her dialogue is crisp and amusing. Her style is economical, yet she manages with skill to introduce details which build steadily toward the proper mood of apprehension, dread, horror.

In this reviewer's opinion, Anne Nash rates four stars for her Death by Design. —I. A.

Extremely popular among all members of the Women's Army Corps is this new summer uniform and hat for enlisted women. Distinctively military, the uniform is made of durable and attractive tropical worsted material and cut along the finest lines of high priced business suits. The form fitting blouses with epaulets and the six gore skirt are identical to those worn by WAC commissioned officers, except for difference in insignia and braid.

The new summer hat, designed by Knox, is a distinctly feminine version of the regular Army overseas cap, made of suntan tropical worsted to match the uniform. Smartly tailored along soft lines, it fits the back of the head snugly, its long tapering lines coming to a graceful point on the forehead. Enlisted women will wear these hats bordered in braid of gold and moss green, the official colors of the Women's Army Corps. This new summer hat is supplemental to the original WAC visored hat, which is retained for formal occasions during the winter, and for optional wear during the summer.

This new summer uniform and hat are part of the complete wardrobe, everything from hat to shoes and from delicate and feminine lingerie to overcoat, which is given to every member of the Women's Army Corps, making them among the best dressed women in America today. Modeling the new WAC uniform and hat is Air Wac Cadet Aline A. Andrus, on duty with the Air Wac Regional Headquarters for Southern California.

Company F Destroys "Enemy" Stronghold

The Monterey Company F of the California State Guard won the approval of their referees, army sergeants, for the manner in which they carried out their problem last week in maneuvers when they set out to destroy an "enemy" beach-head on Monterey beach.

Similar maneuvers are to be carried out each month, and the company is still open to enlistments.

For that cocktail or birthday party, entertain your friends with the string music of Manuel Campos and his Rancheros, former Del Monte Hotel Entertainers, all wearing colorful Mexican outfits and Zarapes. Cost reasonable.

dise, one can reasonably expect to receive that piece of merchandise or get one's money back. This innovation in the principles of business practice hallowed by the centuries, this guessing game system of retailing merchandise, "Give us your money and maybe you'll get something for it and maybe not," is disconcerting to our conventional soul; and we suspect that there are a good many other old fogies like us with whom it isn't popular either. Maybe in years to come a new generation with a better developed sporting instinct will enjoy it, but we feel that the time is not yet ripe. In this unsettled period what the American people want most of all is stability, a sense of security. So we stopped in to see a lawyer friend.

"Is there any state law governing vending machines?" we asked him. "For instance, a law requiring that the machine have an automatic device so money can be returned if the machine is empty or out of order? If there isn't such a statute, I think there should be."

He said he'd look it up.

They Will Find Ways To Have Fun No Matter Where They Are Stuck

Trading clay pipes for exotic shells, diving for oysters, going to the movies and arguing with his tent mates about Salvadore Dali, Howard Stackpole, of the Army Signal Service, one time resident of Carmel and graduate of Sunset School, keeps himself busy and amused at his island base somewhere in the South Pacific.

In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Stackpole, 101 Arroyo Way, San Jose, he describes the trading activities of the American soldiers on the islands, tells them to expect a package of shells which he has mailed them, also a grass skirt made by the natives of a distant village on the island. "It cost 50 cents, which is quite reasonable price when one considers that the Tonks ask 'fife dollah' for a gaudily colored commercialized product that is not truly native, nor is it even good looking. Well, that's what happens when the Army or Navy moves in with lots of money and nowhere to spend it."

His letter continues:

"Not so long ago one of my tent mates brought in a young giant clam which I had the boys at the mess hall cook for dinner that night. The experiment was not a success, however, because the animal was literally tough as shoe leather and very strong of taste. A few days later I brought in another and tried pounding him as one would an abalone, but he pounded to pieces. Nevertheless, I had him cooked, but he was still tough and strong.

"In addition to the clam I brought in, that day I found an oyster in about 20 feet of water. I dove for him and brought him up and subsequently polished his shell. It turned out to be very beautiful and I may try to make something of it.

"Last Sunday eleven of the men of the Company and I went out into the jungle for a hike. Although we started out on a trail, we soon found ourselves hacking our way through the jungle, making our own trail. Half the time we waded up the middle of streams. We had a fine hike, and luckily the day was overcast and the jungle was cool and very pleasant. Strangely enough, we saw no animal life—only a few boar tracks and places where they had been rooting in the earth. In the streams there were lots of crayfish, and some day not far off I'm going crayfishing.

"Last week I saw Song of Bernadette. It was a very beautiful picture, and was refreshing after some of the terrible shows they have. Did I ever tell you that our movies are all free? Thursday night I saw Standing Room Only, which I enjoyed, but it brought to mind a better show in the same vein; The More The Merrier.

"We are having very interesting discussions now on Dali since you sent the book. His writing (and discussion of it) add quite a bit of spice to this boring life here, and several of us are anxiously awaiting his novel, Hidden Faces. How fortunate Ellen Brown was to meet him. Is he now living at Pebble Beach?"

Cora E. Newton

Death came suddenly and quietly for Mrs. Cora E. Newton on the evening of Wednesday, June 7, in her little apartment at the home of her daughter, Mrs. D. E. Nixon, on Dolores street and Ninth, following a long and active life. She was 81 years of age and only the day before her death had enjoyed with Mrs. Nixon and friends a ride around the Seventeen-Mile Drive.

Mrs. Newton was born in Oakland, Illinois, on February 26, 1863. As a child she accompanied her parents in a prairie schooner to Iowa, where the family settled in Story county. In 1882 she was married to Dr. Fred S. Newton of the neighboring town, Nevada, Iowa.

A resident of Carmel for the past quarter of a century, she became an active member of the Church of the Wayfarer on July 21, 1923, and for many years was in charge of the bandage-rolling for the American Mission to Lepers, a post to which she was again appointed last month. Devoted to her church, and possessed of rare qualities of loyalty, and kindliness, she was loved by all who knew her.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. D. E. Nixon of Carmel and Mrs. F. C. McCarty of Ft. Whipple, Arizona; two sons: Dr. W. Z. Newton of Glendale and Fred O. Newton of Kent, Ohio; four grandchildren: Mrs. Margaret Moore of San Leandro, Mrs. Mildred Doyle of Los Angeles, John McCarty of Ft. Whipple, Arizona and Mrs. Dorothy Nixon Betts of Carmel. Three great-grandchildren also survive: Kenneth and Jimmie Moore of San Leandro and Jimmie Doyle of Los Angeles.

Funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon at the Dorney chapel in Monterey, Dr. James E. Crowther officiating. Mrs. Nixon departed for the South following the services, to be present at the interment, which took place at Forest Lawn, Glendale.

Catholic Ladies Raise $275 For Building Fund

The tidy sum of $275 was added last Saturday by the parish ladies of Mission San Carlos de Borromeo to the building fund for the Notre Dame school to be erected in the Mission compound. Around two hundred Carmel citizens and a number from Monterey appeared at Crespi Hall gaily decorated in Spanish manner for the occasion, to partake of a delicious home-cooked ham dinner and remain for an evening of games and other entertainment. Winner of the permanent wave was Mrs. E. W. L. Franklin.

13 Carmel Boys, Coach Rudd At Sur Scout Camp

The Monterey bay area Boy Scout council-operated summer camp, held this year at Camp Esselen, Big Sur, opened last Saturday, June 10, and will remain open until Sunday, July 9.

Thirteen Carmel lads, members of Troop 86, escorted by their leader, Police Officer Frank Hay, and accompanied by Coach "Rudy" Rudd, enrolled at the camp on Saturday for a week's stay. Coach Rudd plans to spend the next two weeks at Camp Esselen, serving as volunteer adult leader not only for Troop 86 but for members of Troop 39, who will encamp for the week of June 17-24.

Each troop has been assigned a campsite and will carry out its own program, under its own leadership, supported by the council camp staff. Emphasis will be placed on the patrol system. If they so choose, each troop may handle its own feeding and cooking on a basis satisfactory to its members, whether they cook for themselves as Scouts by troops or patrols or whether they have the food cooked for them. Program facilities include swimming, campcraft, scoutcraft, handicraft, nature lore, games, campfire programs, songs, dramatics, patriotic ceremonies and religious observances in harmony with the beliefs and wishes of the sponsoring institution and the scouts themselves.

Next Sunday, June 18, will be open day at Camp Esselen for inspection by the health and safety committee of the Scout District Committee. Commissioners, Scout leaders, their families and friends, may visit and inspect the camp on Sunday, June 25, while Sunday, July 2, has been set aside as visiting day for the Cubs.

In addition to the troop leadership, the council is maintaining in residence for health and safety purposes Melville O. Johns, field executive, as camp director; Hilary N. Helsley, field executive, program director; F. J. Franchi, American Red Cross swimming and life-saving and first aid instructor. Dr. Harry Lusignan of Monterey is medical director.

HERE IS NO CHAOS

A narrative series of reminiscent experiences of
PHIL NESBITT

One day, after taking an early morning plunge in the lagoon, I determined to undertake a stroll along the highly picturesque quai of the tropical town of Papeete. I started off from the Temehani Hotel where I was sojourning. Along the way I held several conversations with agreeable natives. I spoke at some length to a fat vahine who carried a string basket containing a bright green fish and some oranges.

You know, if you walk along the quai in Papeete and keep a seaward eye on the shallow waters of the lagoon, you can and will see a veritable multitude of small and exquisitely decorative creatures, fish in two tones of brilliant electric blue, angel fish and purple coral fish. There is also a little slow moving fish with a nose like a hippopotamus. The tail of this fish moves with the same rapidity as the wings of a humming bird. Also, there is a shrimp with a plume, a feathery plume erect above its head. In fact, a seeing eye will embrace so much to divert the mind that as one walks, the whole being of the walker becomes filled with inner peace and grace. To witness nature in a state of perfect functioning invariably provokes immense contentment.

In the course of my stroll I saw a graceful little sailing vessel tied up to a coral jetty which thrust out into the lagoon. I said to myself then, "Here is where I shall sit and make a sketch of the village of Papeete."

I climbed out across the narrow plank which ran from jetty to ship's side and seated myself comfortably on the splintery deck. It was an old schooner, rather small. Its underside, or hull, was white, its cabin structure blue. I looked at the village. Numerous persimmon coloured houses were set against the emerald green of banana fronds.It was indeed a charming vista. It was, and is, highly paintable. Old Queen Pomare's palace, standing to the left, also pink, edged into my mental plot of the picture I was about to paint. This latter structure was somewhat ornate and very old. It was streaked with some sort of grey lichen, and presented splendid subject matter for a water colourist.

After I had sketched happily for a time, sleepiness came to me. Taking off my shirt, I rolled it into a ball and used if for a pillow. I had almost fallen asleep when I heard a sudden bellowing from shore. Looking up, I perceived a troop of khaki clad gendarmes madly rushing up the plank. Realizing that they were in the act of performing some vital mission, I asked them what was amiss.

They all spoke at once. My ears caught but one comprehensible word. It was leprosy. Gradually what they were attempting to say to me became clear. The little old fashioned sloop upon which I sat had very recently been used to transport a cargoe of nearly dead leapers from one island to another.

We were walking one day in Tahiti, a yellow headed fellow and myself. He was Swedish. We were about thirty-five miles from that small capitol of the Isle, Papeete, where they drink only beer and champagne after ten at night.

We were at Hitiaa, a moist and rainy portion of the island. To our left extended a verdant jungle valley running to an apex where two mountain ranges came abruptly together. In Tahiti, the mountains are reddish green and craggy. Behind us lay one of the two headlands. We were walking around the brow of the other, ahead of us. From an increasing height we could look down at the glassy, deep turquoise surface of the lagoon. The reef, about a mile out, showed immense plumes of snowy white foam where the big rollers from the deep hit and broke.

A twelve foot sand shark, dismally unbelligerent looking, was basking in the shallows of the lagoon just below us. I flung a pebble at him. My aim was excellent. The little pebble sent him off in a remarkable panic, like a clumsy torpedo. He vanished into the greener and more obscure depths.

We were conversing of the old lady. The old lady lived somewhere around the headland. We were uncertain of the exact spot. She was reputed to be quite old, An ancient, in fact. There were coco palms leaning out over the lagoon's edge as we walked along. There was a casurina tree, like the one written of by Somerset Maughan, a very beautiful tree, looking like a small, misty cloud in the distance.

The air was drowsy warm. Big insects zoomed out of the bushes and from the fiery blossoms of the flamboyant trees. It was like a breath-taking of the whole universe. It was as if, instead of eternally changing itself, the world had suddenly decided to remain still.

After we had walked about a mile, we suddenly saw a red tin roof through the foliage. That must have been the old lady's house, we thought. A path, overgrown and fern crowded, led in the direction of the red roof. A grove of papyea trees ringed with mushy masses of fallen fruit cast a sickly, pungent smell into the air.

A little more walking on the pathway brought us to the house. Once it had been pink, after the taste of the more colourful tropical house dwellers. Now it had faded like an old wedding dress. I guess it was more of sunbleached persimmon colour. The roof had been repainted fairly recently. When we knocked on the door, we had to stand in the buzzing sunlight and wait for about five minutes. Then a treble voice, like that of a boy of twelve, inquired who it might be. She spoke in French. God, she must have been an old lady! Her French was that of the island traders of over a hundred years back. She opened the door, and we walked into the cool and dark inside of the little persimmon coloured house.

The yellow headed fellow with me took from his pocket the roll of dried vanilla beans which he had brought to give her. By this time we began to see more clearly. Such a curious interior, in the middle of which sat the old lady. She was dressed in missionary fashion, severely and yet not so, for she was a Tahitian. Also in the corners of the room were worm-devoured remants of old tribal tikis, or wooden gods.

The old lady began to tell us about the island life when she was a little girl. We were listening well, for her descriptions of the events of her childhood lay in another century. She dealt with catastrophic episodes concerning what they have long termed "black birding," which meant that the planters and schooner owners came to the peaceful villages and took bodily the finest males for labour in the nitrate mines or on the coco plantations of other remote islands. This was very sad and for awhile we sat in the gloom thinking about it. Then she told how her grandparents had been eaten by cannibals. Do you know that cannibalism died out only shortly after that famous cat's paw of the first Earl of Sandwich, Captain Cook, had come upon these Society Isles?

All this time we were looking at the tiny countenance of the animated old lady. She was still an object of beauty, wrinkles and all. Her eyes were like polished agates. They flashed. Her teeth were still fine and white. Today the Tahitians have eaten so much American canned fruit and meat that their teeth have decayed in a disgusting fashion. A certain official of Great Britain in Papeete has made a small fortune fixing the teeth of the natives. He bought an atoll with the money. He goes there in his power boat

NOTES AT A TIME OF CRISIS

NEWS ITEM
June 6th, 1944

There was a rainbow swung across the dawn
As the dark barges moved in from the sea—
An arch of seven circles, purely drawn
Against the cold grey light, simple and free.
The men close-crowded in the thrusting prow
Peering against the dim coast's shadowed line
Looked up and saw the promise on the brow
Of that first day, and hailed it for a sign.

O rainbows on the wheatfields of the West!
On Minnesota lakes and Kansas plains!
On California groves, the snowy crest
Of proud Sierras, through the Southern rains;
You were all there—each memory played its part—
Each soldier bore his rainbow in his heart.

THEY ARE NOT ALONE

They are ourselves, our courage and our faith,
Those men who crossed the channel in the dawn
To land against the tyranny of hate.
Nay they were more than sons, more than beloved,
Fighting their way through fire and fear and death,
Against all obstacles, all arrogance,
To carry liberation to the lost.
All that we hope for peace is with them there;
They are our will, our conscience and our strength;
Our trust in God, our confidence in Man;
They are the love we bear to little children;
They are our pity for a land betrayed;
They are the hand of brother stretched to brother
Humbly . . . because we found no better way.

—D. H.

THE OLD PLACE

Here is the brook that spoke in the meadow,
This is the gnarled, knurled cherry tree,
Where the robins came, close as a shadow,
The tree and birds in one periphery.

This is the path, once wide as the cattle,
Now a thickset of brake and weed,
Here is the barn, now spiked by the nettle,
And the garden-patch, now bramble and seed.

Here is the house once loud with palaver
Of a boy greening in sun and rain,
Scarred by the seasons, silent ever,
Lost to the boy come back again.

It was a house so close to heaven,
From his attic room a boy foretold
It would stand stout and strong, now it is even
As scarred as he, stained and spent and old.

—ALEX R. SCHMIDT.

REVIEWS

Mrs. Low Reviews Kingdon Book For Demo Club Meeting

A review by Mrs. Paul Low of Frank Kingdon's recently published book, That Man in the White House, was given at the meeting of the Carmel Women's Democratic Club, on Friday in the Sunset School library, Mrs. Perry Newberry presiding.

Mr. Kingdon has long been a familiar voice on Town Meeting of the Air. An Englishman by birth, a Methodist minister by vocation and by later choice an educator, he was for a number of years President of the University of Newark, resigning in 1940 to serve as Chairman of the International Rescue and Relief Committee. His book contains, in simple, terse paragraphs, a statement of fact unclouded by fancy and untroubled by impassioned pleading, Mrs. Low said.

The President is exhibited, first in relation to such of his predecessors as Washington, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson; then in the light of his performance as the nation's chief executive in times that again call for initiative and imagination; and finally, as his detractors are pleased to see and to stigmatize him. There they are, all neatly laid out —the sober facts, the extravagant epithets. Frank Kingdon the writer is as vigorous and intelligent and straightforward as Frank Kingdon the public speaker, said Mrs. Low who read freely from the book itself, letting her audience have the original flavor of the author's mind along with his summary of events and appraisal of character.

The club will meet again on the first Friday in July. —E. M. O.

"After Dark" Still Packing Them In At First Theatre

"After Dark," current melodrama at the First Theatre, Monterey, continues to charm and delight its capacity audiences each Saturday and Sunday night. The competent cast of Troupers of the Gold Coast, directed by Wilma Bott, stars Dorothy Mahoney as Eliza and Blanche Ann Lodato as Rose Edgerton. Both are entirely convincing and at home in their roles.

The settings for "After Dark," designed and painted by Maxine Albro, draw applause with each performance, being alone well worth the price of admission. The London Street, Sir George Medhurst's home and garden, the "Silver Hell" gambling den, the docks on the Thames, and the underground railway scenes are done with a skill and artist-perception of the First Theatre stage that will go down in the history of the Monterey First Theatre's distinguished contributions.

No Excuse Now Department

AN OLD FRIEND IN THIS LIST? THIS IS HIS ADDRESS. WRITE HIM NOW!

"So many of us think of our friends who have gone into the armed forces and would like to write to them, but we don't have their address and somehow we never get around to hunting up the relative or friend who does," said Jerry Hasty, Sunday afternoon. "But if their names and addresses appeared in the Pine Cone—" And then and there a column was born.

Relatives and friends are invited to phone or send the address of Carmel men in the armed forces to the Pine Cone Office, Phone 2, P. O. Box G-1. We will print them here and friends seeing them will be reminded and write them a breezy letter full of home town gossip that is worth more than its weight in gold to the recipient.

Ghost Tree Cook Book Gay Effort Of Officers' Wives

Do you know how to cook fake steak and trifle? The art of preparing these odd sounding and palate tempting dishes is no secret to the Army and Navy Officers' Wives of the Monterey Peninsula who have included them among the interesting collection of recipes in their new Ghost Tree Cook Book, printed recently by the Pine Cone Press.

To all good Gastronomes
Whether they feast on the fat of the land
Or subsist on short commons,
Whether they pine for the ambrosia of the Gods
Or love gravy on their 'taters,
And to Dr. Bagby, author of the immortal line:
"But sert'ny I duz luv to eet;"
As well as to all others whose names are
Ever associated with the vituals they have sung,
Set store by, served, set up, sighed for, or swallowed.

This Book is cordially inscribed by its compilers, To Mrs. C. J. Hulsewe and the members of Woman's Auxiliary All Saints' Church Carmel, California, reads the dedication of the gay little book with the shivery title. Sandwiched among recipes gathered from such widely separated locales as Danville, Virginia, Uniontown, Pennsylvania and Berkeley, California, are bits of verse from Burns and Shelley anent the joys of eating meat and the more delicate pleasure of dining on custards, syllabubs and jellies. The collection of favorite recipes of officers' wives stationed here during the war was edited by Mrs. George Taggart who also served as business manager with Mrs. Richard Weller, Mrs. R. B. Coldren, Mrs. Walter Thoms, Mrs. Basil Gravatt and Mrs. Stillman Covell assisting.

Sold out already with the exception of four or five copies, The Ghost Tree Cook Book will go into another edition shortly. Proceeds from the first edition went to the Army and Navy Emergency Relief and All Saints' Church.

RED CROSS BULLETINS

By HELEN A. FIELD

Last week just as the Invasion started there arrived in the Surgical Dressings Room of Carmel Chapter American Red Cross four young women, wives of men in our Armed Forces. They have come to fold dressings to be used for our sick and wounded servicemen. From Michigan, Massachusetts, Kentucky and Kansas, gathered here in Carmel, were Mrs. Roland, Mrs. Heddens, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Ditch. They learned how to make the dressings and each of them turned out fifty, good work for beginners, and were about to say Goodbye when the supervisor for the day said, "Don't you want to join the HUNDRED DRESSINGS OR BUST CLUB?" They did apparently for they returned in the afternoon. Not only did they do a good day's work but their enthusiasm and their accomplishment gave a lift to all the Surgical Dressings workers who knew about them.

We need more workers in our Surgical Dressings room—workers who so realize the needs of our men in battle areas and hospitals that they make an effort to come regularly for work. Any day from Monday through Friday there is a place at Red Cross Headquarters for you to be of service to our country in this day of great need. Come.

There are a few places left in the Nurses Aide Class, to begin on Monday, June 19 at 9:30 a. m. for those who have not yet registered to take the course. If you can possibly join the class the need for Nurses Aides to care for our sick, now that so many of our regular trained nurses have gone in the Service, demands that you consider very seriously taking advantage of this excellent opportunity. Register at Red Cross Headquarters as soon as possible.

on Sunday afternoons.

Suddenly the yellow headed fellow realized that the sun was setting. I had been wondering why it was getting dark. We said goodbye to the old lady. I was filled with admiration for her. She had lived so long. She had been so courageous in her intellect. She was a fine old lady. Except for the wrinkles of her face, she was a girl yet.

We didn't speak during our return crossing of the verdant headland, but all the time I was thinking of what a freedom loving human being the old lady was. No shadow of "human bondage" lay about her.

New "Bundles" Sign Symbol Of Friendship

Bundles for America and Bundles for Britain have found that many of the newcomers to Carmel fail to realize that their Dolores Street Thrift shop is the Carmel branch of the two national charities and think it just an ordinary antique shop. So the members have put up a sign which they hope will add to, or at least won't detract from, the air of gaiety which is one of the great charms of Carmel's shopping district. Bundles hopes that if anyone fails to grasp the small puzzle of the sign, that she will come inside and ask about it.

The sign is symbolic of the friendly relations of the two societies. Its design was suggested by an Englishwoman, the Countess Kinnoull. The wood work was the gift of an American friend of both charities, Mr. Whitney Palache, and it was drawn and painted by Mrs. Ellis Roberts, an American by birth, married to an English writer.

Free Tickets To "Harvest Moon" For Bond Buyers

The Carmel Theatre announces a War Bond Premiere showing of a grand new Hollywood musical film, "Shine On, Harvest Moon," for the night of June 29th, at 9 p. m. Every bond purchased in Carmel during the Fifth War Loan drive entitles the purchaser to one ticket, so long as the tickets last.

The story of "Shine On, Harvest Moon," which stars Ann Sheridan and Dennis Morgan, centers about the rise of Nora Bayes, a famous singer of the early 1900's, from cabaret entertainer to Ziegfeld star. A nice variety of entertainment, from songs and comedy—both old and new—to a trained seal, lifts this latest story of vaudeville's nostalgic charms to a high level of enjoyment.

Bonds may be purchased at the Carmel Theatre, the Post Office, the two banks and the Carmel Building and Loan Association. The number of tickets is, of course, limited, so requests for tickets should be placed early.

Board Considers Budget; Cadets To Have Rifles

A budget of $143,915.00 providing for an increased expenditure of $8,486.00 was presented by Peter Mawdsley to the Carmel School Board Tuesday night and the board set August 7 as the date for a public hearing preceding its adoption.

In his analysis of the proposed budget, Mawdsley pointed out that provision has been made for the new accumulative building fund of $60,000 over a period of five years involving an annual appropriation of $12,000. This, along with the ordinary budget increase would necessitate a tax increase of about twenty cents, but the final tax is estimated to be only six cents higher than last year, 88c against 82c, because this year the 12c increase is offset by a 6c saving on the general tax, reduced from 82c to 76c. After two years it will be more than offset by the running out of two Sunset School bond issues, equaling 7c.

The saving in the general tax is made possible by a substantial cash balance arising from unexpected income and from savings on unspent provisions of this year's budget. The estimated surplus from the latter is $8,200 and unexpected tax redemptions and surplus in a closed bond fund amount to $4,800.

The board approved the hiring of two new teachers, John H. Westover, who will teach mathematics in the high school and will be adut school principal—Frank L. McClain is to be vice-principal at the high school next term—and Miss Elizabeth James who will teach physical education.

The board also approved the posting of a $5000 bond to cover the loan of infield rifles from the government for the use of the High School cadet corps.

George Marion In Radio Program

Of great interest to Carmel was last week's program presented in the "Your Show" series given over KOND on Thursdays at 8 p. m. Not only was the real life incident, dramatized by John Latham, taken from the experience of a retired colonel who makes his home in Carmel, his anonymity preserved under the name of Colonel Cole, but his poignant reactions to the first broadcast news of the invasion were interpreted by Carmel's own celebrated stage veteran, George Marion.

The episode that was unfolded through the mellow and moving tones of this fine actor showed the old colonel visualizing the far-off action, realizing that men of his own division, whom he had trained, were taking part and rising to don his uniform in order to share with them more fully the stirring events of the night.

Ida Gregory Scott Opens Studio

A class in the fundamentals of voice production was opened this week by Ida Gregory Scott in her studio at Lopez and Fourth.

When Mrs. Scott came, a little over two years ago, to make her home in Carmel, her name was already well known to many music-lovers of this community who had enjoyed the distinguished series of Fortnightly concerts and lectures which she established and maintained over a long period in San Francisco. So outstanding has been her contribution as an impressario one is apt to overlook the fact that Mrs. Scott is herself a well-trained artist with a notable concert career of her own on record.

In New York she studied with Eva Hawkes, a pupil of Buchy and Manuel Garcia, then spent four years in Paris and Italy, as a student of Mme. Meyerheim and for three years studied under the celebrated Jean de Reszke. In London she worked for a year under Yeatman Griffith, specializing on Russian songs with Sir Henry Wood as coach and modern French songs with Gustave Ferrari, as well as perfecting herself in twelve major operatic roles.

Then followed concert tours in Australia and through the Orient, with appearances at famed Old Vic in London. With the outbreak of World War I, a career was forgotten while she remained for a time in England, helping to receive the Belgian refugees after the fall of Antwerp, then returned to California where she plunged into war relief work, giving programs for the benefit of American ambulance service in Paris.

Then for seven years Mrs. Scott continued to sponsor noteworthy musical events and lectures in San Francisco, establishing as her motto, "The Program's the Thing," and catering to a discriminating audience.

Alex Fried, writing in the San Francisco Chronicle, expressed the following appreciation of Mrs. Scott's project: "Thanks to Ida Gregory Scott, we have the pleasure each season of hearing distinctive and interesting music which were it not for her, would unfortunately be strange to our ears."
